

Fishbowl:

I think you'll be divided into two groups, and we'll choose a question for each group randomly. Each group will have a chance to listen and then a chance to discuss. . .

•••Be prepared to discuss the following questions. Have at least three direct quotations, noted in your copy of the play, to assist your discussion.

- Discuss Linda's role in the play. What does she represent? What does she understand? Is she heroic or merely enabling?

- Miller states that "the tragic feeling is evoked in us when we are in the presence of a character who is ready to lay down his life, if need be, to secure one thing--his sense of personal dignity." How does Willy fit that definition? Does any other character in the book fit it? Why or why not?

- What is Death of a Salesman about, in the grand sense?
